

ENGAGE. SHARE. INNOVATE.

Unlocking the Potential of African Research

Our mission at the African Digital Library Support Network (ADLSN) is to support the preservation and dissemination of digital content in, across, and beyond Africa by partnering with universities and other organizations to deliver local digital solutions that are aligned with global standards and best practices.

Our newest initiative is to implement research-sharing infrastructure across Africa in the form of digital repositories that store, share, and publish research data and publications.

Our strategy is to start with one country (Cameroon), create a flexible model that we can adapt to meet local requirements, and replicate this model across Africa.

We're creating an interconnected collection of research output (e.g., articles, dissertations, and data) to serve the needs of a variety of stakeholders including scientists, students, policy makers, and companies within the continent and across the world.

ADLSN seeks funding to implement Connecting Cameroon.

Our three-year Connecting Cameroon project will...

- Create and implement a digital repository solution to serve Cameroon's 27 universities.
- Build capacity of local staff responsible for infrastructure management and maintenance.
- Ensure widespread adoption through communication, training, and outreach.
- Implement a sustainability plan that ensures self-sufficiency within three years.

Visit us at adlsn.org or contact us at info@adlsn.org

African Digital Library Support Network (ADLSN)